Confessing one's sins to God is not just spiritual. There is a scientific physiological healing process involved directly in relation to the forgiveness of one's sins, a process missed out on by those who would rather give in to the natural reaction to cognitive dissonance.

There is an element of self-hate, as it pertains to the exterior and not the interior, that resonates within the Liberal. I know because I am one myself and I also know that the contempt for ones likeness, even when finally victorious in the subjugation of it, continues on and extends toward the remaining parts until there is no one left to remind one of himself.

I often say Trump lacks diplomacy, but now I realize I was somewhat wrong, or in other words, INCOMPLETE. To say Donald Trump lacks tact and diplomacy is incomplete because those traits can be defined as multi-directional....meaning that it's application in one direction doesn't automatically correlate to the same degree of how it would be applied, by that same person, in all directions. If that was the case, Donald Trump would get into a fight every time he met with someone face to face. But what is happening is that every single time he meets face to face with someone(even those initially opposed to him), they come out of the meeting with a totally different perspective of him as we have already seen many times. So why is it easy for Donald Trump to display a measure of tact and diplomacy with individuals directly, even to those who hate him, on a face to face basis.....but struggle to find the right words when expressing himself outwardly and indirectly through speech and social media? One can argue he is doing this on purpose, but even the most overt forms of what is considered to be human rebellion... all seem to carry a fundamental lack of energy and inclination toward the very action that is being rebelled against.

A woman who expects a man to have ambition is often unfairly labelled a Gold-digger without realizing that women were created by God for the very purpose of this ambition. In Genesis 2:18, it says The LORD God said, "It is not good for the man to be alone. I will make a helper suitable for him." In order for women to engage in this assigned role, a man would have to actively be doing something productive that would require this help.

The biggest threat of terrorism in the western world is not the termination of the existence of the country that the terrorism is taking place, but to the reaction of the peoples who live in that country, and their willingness or unwillingness to engage in a systemic amoral manner in order to stop it.....all while maintaining the self-belief of being righteous in the sight of all that was taught to them and all that was accepted by them as right or wrong.

She would make a great president. She just commands so much respect. Even Trump chose his words carefully when making a statement about her in response to something he could have easily interpreted as negativity towards him. That shows just how powerful the identity of this woman is. Black women have represented the race far better than the men.

Developing economically, whether individually or societally requires some for form of servitude, because whether or not you are working for a boss or working for yourself, the exchange of money for a service will give some measure of authority or strength to the one making the payment. A person will have a hard time making it materially, within the bounds of civility, if he/she rejects this element of nature.

The reason I gathered back in March that Berlin would eventually be hit by an ISIS terror attack was because of this video of Hitler giving a speech. In it, he explains hows Jews are everywhere and then gets specific in terms of which cities they are heavily populated in. Notice the order in which he mentions the first 3 capital cities in which they are located. He starts with Berlin, then Brussells and then Paris. So far, major ISIS attacks have occured in these three cities, BUT in the opposite order.... in Paris, in Brussels, and then in Berlin. Now using pattern recognition, we can guage that it's very possible that the next 3 targets are the next three cities that Hitler mentions which are Prague, Vienna, and London....but occuring in the opposite order of the way Hitler stated it as that was the case for the first 3. So, in follwing pattern recognition, it's posssible that the next three attacks could occur in the order of London, Vienna, and then Prague. ISIS may have used this video as inspiration for planning their attacks. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_0V_xf3OQgM

Trump seems to just go along with whatever the immediate environment and the immediate circumstance calls for and neglects whatever isn't around at the moment. It makes it hard to pin him down and classify his style as anything except for unprincipled. If he is at a rally, he is the populist. If he is with a group of minorities, then he pro-minority. If he is talking to Taiwan, then he is pro-Taiwan. If he is in the White House, then he is pro-establishment....whatever fits the matter at hand as he doesn't believe there is any implication as it pertains to how those who are not around(at the moment) might feel about it and what is confusing is that he blatantly admits it right to people's faces. To be fair, this aspect, as it pertains to his method and not his open admission of it, does fall in-line with how many politicians operate. The playing field of politics is a very dishonest one and everyone knows that. He knows that and I'm sure it's part of the reason he is having no shame in his game. However, with him admitting it right to peoples' faces as something he has done before, now and will continue to do basically doesn't leave anyone with that conscience-saving doubt or that "never feeling like you're in on whatever game any politician is playing because you have that slight doubt."

In terms of race relations, it's a no-win for Whites. The general sentiment amongst blacks is that if whites cater to us, then it must be some form of exploitation on their part and If they don't, then they are discriminating against us. I don't know of any scenario in which European Americans would be considered, at least by the black community, to be acting in the best interest of African Americans. I do know one thing, if blacks don't learn to articulate EXACTLY what they want in society at least in terms of specifics and not in terms of vague words like "Equality" then whites will always be somewhat in the dark on how to handle us because lets face it "Equality" to many blacks means they should have certain advantages in certain areas due to the history of Slavery and the subsequent civil rights oppression. Ok, fine....at least something more concrete is formulating.....we're getting somewhere. The next step is to articulate exactly where those advantages should occur IF they are not already there and we just didn't notice it. Now our discussion can go a little further after we have agreed on what can be arranged. All this is better than spouting out "man, we want equality" and then throwing the microphone in the air. Can't do much with that in the way of finding solutions.

It's important that those who are against Donald Trump don't fall into the trap of letting their desire to be right about him get in the way of actually wanting him to do a good job. Because if that turns out to be the case, then your prophecy wouldn't so much fall under being an accurate one. It would probably, more so, fall under being a self-fulfilling one.

I can go up to someone and say "Hey, you're angry" and he could reply "No, I'm not" To which then in my desire to be right, I began to actively push the person's buttons in the hope that he does get angry leading my self-esteem to get a boost from making the right judgement. However, that cannot be considered an accurate judgement, as active provocation was involved on my part and I knew it.

If he is at a sit-down meeting with African Americans, then he is pro-black. If he is in the Majority Republican White House, then he is pro-Republican. If he is at a club with wealthy business owners then he pro-wealthy business owner. If he is talking to the Leader of Taiwan, then he is pro-Taiwan. If he is at the Swamp, then he is all about the Swamp. I am seeing a pattern here, he is only playing whatever game is in front of him and ignoring how that might effect what isn't there at the moment. Basically, the very moment you become irrelevant to him is the moment you become his enemy.

This is a load of crap. There is no need for an investigation before a formal arrest. Obvious 2nd degree murder with multiple witnesses. Last year, and not to diminish the tragedy of it, when Will Smith was killed in a similar scenario, the shooter, who was black. stayed at the scene just like Ron Gasser did, turned in his gun just like Ron Gasser did, and was arrested immediately and charged with 2nd degree murder and placed on a 1 million dollar bond. This case, in which Joe Mcknight, who unlike Will Smith, had no gun, neither on himself nor in the car----and that is according to the cops---- is being investigated as someone who was an immediate threat to Mr. Gasser safety. The same protocol of an immediate arrest that was applied towards Cardell Hayes, the man who shot Will Smith, should have been applied to Ron Gasser. He should have been arrested and charged with 2nd degree murder.

Somedays, I wonder if it's not the abuse of the freedom of speech that is the problem, but the abuse of the freedom of thought leading to certain behaviours and the refusal of some people to manage those thoughts properly or at all for that matter. We all react to a certain extent, but there is point when you begin to restrict another person's freedom and that's really not fair. Yes, people have to be aware of the feelings of others, but likewise, those looking after their own feelings and sentiments should also try to be aware of the freedom of others.

The biggest hype about Donald Trump was that he was somehow out of bounds of what we would consider a modern-day politician. If people want change, they should vote third party instead of relying on an individual to take them to the promised land. Our Government isn't designed for dictators. An individual's agenda cannot override the agenda of Congress. America has seen this attempt made by Andrew Johnson back in the 1800's, who in some respects, was a populist like Donald Trump. Andrew Johnson wanted the southern states to decide how to implement the reconstruction process with regards to minorities, however, Congress, which was Republican at the time, maintained that it be done at the Federal level. Almost every policy to restrict the freedoms of Blacks in the south put forth by Andrew Johnson never made it through Congress, and many policies put forth by the GOP Congress on behalf of the minorities in the south was vetoed by Johnson only to be overridden and later passed. To the GOP's credit, they were able to push an agenda that favoured the freedoms of blacks in the south despite having someone like Andrew Johnson in office.

Many are tired of Donald Trump being called a racist, or having it insinuated that he is a racist. In my humble opinion, one cannot be in denial of the events that have transpired in the past few years and just how it could have lead to NOT just one race, but different races feeling the need to get in formation as a way to deflect what they feel is an attack from another race or group. There is a high probability that he and many, but not all, who voted for him were influenced by the racial tension in the environment from what they have been hearing and seeing as attacks on them from various media sources. In my opinion, that doesn't make you a full blown racist, yet. But if the tension in the environment doesn't settle, then at some point, it will only lead to a more harsh divisive world-view, which is dangerous for a president who I feel is very prone to it. Observing his behaviour and not seeing too many others laying off their attacks on other races only leads me to think that he could be headed down a dark road. Some racism is natural and some is inspired and some is both. The bottom line is that once it's there, it's there. Just think of it as a person who has an angry impulse. He may be prone to anger, however, he can keep in check most of the time until the environment becomes overwhelming and then it surfaces.

In our society, the majority of people are very sensitive, and in a Democracy you have to cater to that in some way. Trump has shown during his campaign, through his use of words, that he is not willing to do that. It's like refusing to give a starving population food and at the same time expecting them not to die of starvation. The bottom line is that he will get his chance no matter what the people say, but the fact that he could revert back if he actually changes in the first place, to the Donald Trump of the campaign trail is something that will linger in everyone's mind and cannot be expected to go away overnight and rightly so.

I am not saying she was perfect. If anything is certain, she has been guilty by association. However, those she associates with and those she is in relationships with were not on the ballot. It's very difficult for a president to get around political party legislative agenda in order to push their own, unless that candidate has his own party that represents his own personal values with a majority of seats in congress, as the world witnessed in the case of Hitler. Every candidate, in this country, that has ever ran for office and every voter that has ever voted for a candidate running for office has always believed that for some reason, this new candidate will somehow be able to pull off the impossible and maneuver his way around the tight U.S. legislation and give the people exactly what they want. That attempt, while tried over and over, has failed every time. Where a candidate does have freedom and no legislative restriction is in how they choose to respond to that limitation. Some do it with more vacations, others do it with selfish behavior, but I don't think in the history of the country, there has ever been a candidate that will do it with unrestrained public speech. And for the reason of it never being done before and it in itself seeming so harmless, many do not know the consequences of such behavior. Hopefully, it's not too late by the time they do.

Hillary, on the email controversy and Trump on a child rape civil suit that the Judge will move forward with on December 16th. A Hillary supporter, in the case that she becomes president, faces a potential moral dilemma of having voted in criminal who violated federal law..... if she is convicted, but a trump supporter, in the case that he becomes president and loses the civil suit against him for child rape, faces the potential moral dilemma of having voted in a pedophile.

Trump will put a dent in the efforts of the government to de-radicalize, through diplomacy, potential Islamic extremist that are already in this country,.....a huge key to fighting terrorism. That is the biggest danger of a Trump presidency. I, personally, don't think a good economy is worth having to deal with an increase in sporadic terrorist attacks on American Soil on the scale of what happened in Paris, Brussels, and Nice. But one can say, "Oh we are already experiencing it, how much worse can it get?" It can get much worse.....to the point where it will leave our government with no choice but to handle the situation in a systematic and amoral manner.....a style that has morally, from a religious standpoint, tarnished this country's past. Many people feel that this scenario is much better than the scenario of a major conflict with Russia.....which is felt, by many, would come with a Hillary presidency. Just remember that the dynamics of the relationship between Trump and Putin changes if Trump becomes president. They may be on good terms now, but if Trump becomes president, Putin would then be placed in an inferior position to him, then, as opposed to before when Trump was just a real estate mogul. With Russia's bad economy, Trump, as president, would eventually find that Putin is almost useless to him.

We don't know the outcome of Hillary's FBI investigation, but if she becomes president and then charged and later convicted, then yes, technically---in hindsight---one would have voted a criminal in office, However, on the other hand, Donald Trump, if elected, must still go to court on December 16th and face a lawsuit filed by a woman claiming that he raped her when she was 13 years old. Just like Hillary, we don't know the outcome, but if the court rules in the accuser's favour, then everyone who voted for Trump, not only voted a criminal in office, but also a child rapist.

I hate lying as much as anyone else, however in politics, the general consensus is that most, if not all politicians lie to some extent which doesn't leave the public with much to go on when it comes to choosing a candidate for their integrity and honesty. The general public has accepted this reality, hence the fact that they still go out and continue to vote. So trying to single out Hillary Clinton for lying, when Trump and pretty much everyone who runs for office does it, is a bit cliche' in my humble opinion.

The negative characteristics of Hillary Clinton are less detrimental overall to a country than the negative characteristics of Donald Trump. A president's job abilities has to cater, moreso, to those at a distance like the general public, foreigners, etc.... as opposed to those in the immediate environment like associates and co-workers. Try to think of choosing between 2 basketball players, one that has 2 missing arms and one that has 2 missing legs. The one with 2 missing arms(Hillary) can still play defense and run up and down the court. The one with 2 missing legs(Trump) can only shoot the ball. Therefore, the team will have a better chance at winning with the person that has 2 missing arms, as running up and down the court and being able to stand in front of someone is more functional to a team's success than laying motionless in one spot and being depended upon to make a shot every now and then.

This election is starting to look like a conspiracy against the GOP, orchestrated by none other than Donald Trump himself. If someone were trying to lose the election, what they would be doing is no different that what Trump is doing now. It seems like his removal of self discipline in choice of words proceeded incrementally each GOP party member's removal of support for him. As one withdrew support, he withdrew more tact, bringing him to where he is now. I can't understand how a party as old and as traditional as the GOP could allow one man to just destroy it like that. His behaviour has been total debauchery of the Republican Party.

It's hard for white people to get behind this movement when you have people like BLM's co-founder and people like Louis Farrakhan talking about killing white people, and not having their statements refuted by people within the BLM community. It also doesn't help when the Dallas shooter wanted to kill white people also.

The door of using one incident as a subset of some issue all the time has been opened for everyone to go in and out of freely. Now no one can trust anything, ever, at this point. A man gets rejected by a first love and now hates all women. A man get betrayed by one of his boys and now hates all dudes. A man does something he regrets and now hates his own authority. The list just goes on

I wonder if anyone finds it ironic that when an incident of police brutality occurs that is obvious to everyone, that it's a woman who will face charges and be punished and serve as the national example of law enforcement's crackdown on police brutality and not the typical white male who has been made to be the posterboy for police brutality for some time now. I wonder if it's easier for Law Enforcement to come down on and make an example of a female police officer who committed a crime than it would be for them to have to make an example of a male police officer who committed a crime .....due to sexist feelings.

Well, it is race driven in the sense that many blacks today are seen as a threat, however, it's unfairly conveyed that it's ONLY whites that see us as a threat. The problem is everyone sees us as a threat. I've been profiled not just by white police officers, but also by black police officers, and I am sure that there are many blacks who have shared the same experiences in dealing with police that are not white. And to take it even further, I've also been profiled by white and black civilians, hell, even hispanic, asian and african civilians even if that profiling only leads them to giving me a dirty look or a smart remark/racial slur. The problem comes down, not so much to black on black violence, but our national identity which gladly represents that aspect of our culture in both appearance and speech. Gladly is the keyword there. When you accept a certain amount of money to get on national television and behave a certain way, you have the accept the consequences of how a national audience will take it. Denzel Washington was presented with an issue similar to what i am talking about when he turned down a role early in his career and thus missing out on the monetary benefit of accepting it because he was aware of the importance of image and how you are perceived.

Morality and character doesn't come without a price. In a rejection of amoral and systematic solutions, we now have to face a reality of sporadic terrorist attacks. Individuals are capable of more damage than ever before. Pretty soon, it will be impossible to go anywhere in this country without feeling like you're someone else's target. Everyone can forget about the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Those days are pretty much over. The next great Depression will involve a great deal of fear, loss of loved ones through terrorism, total mistrust of anything that moves, an inability to settle down, and finally a complete denial of anything to do with reality.

The Jews dominate the media (even though they only make up 1 percent of the population) because they excel at it. Blacks dominate major sports (even though they only make up 12 percent of the population) because they excel at it. Whites dominate business and management because they excel at it. In this country, if people as a whole prove themselves to excel at something over others, then those people, based on the facts that I just gave, will be given top priority in whatever field that is. If a group of people complain about a lack of priority given to them in one area, than in all fairness, they should also complain about the abundance of priority given to them in another.

Somehow Obama is distinct from all the problems blacks are facing in this country even though he's had 8 years to do something about it. Racism, while still existing in certain parts, cannot be considered what is holding back blacks this day in age. How did President Obama get elected twice? The main problem for black men is the rise of a culture that promotes killing other blacks. Something that should have remained a subculture, now has become the very definition of what it is to be black. Every young black man has to carry that self-inflicted image around everywhere he goes. It's gotten to the point where even our own people.....down to ones donning the image itself are profiling us as a threat to their own safety. Why do you think small arguments between black men end in violence and death? Because one doesn't trust what the other might be thinking. Anyone remember football player Will Smith's death. Well that is one example of exactly the problem I'm talking about. The question shouldn't be why are cops shooting at us, but why is everyone shooting at us???

In New Orleans, before Katrina, when it was 75-80 percent black or something like that, I couldn't help but notice during times of job searching that many places of employment were occupied more so by black females than black males. I'm sure in cities like Atlanta, that are majority black, you'll find the same thing....that more blacks females are getting the most of the opportunities available than the black males are getting. Now, why could this be? Is it because Black men didn't want to work, or did the employers doing the hiring consider black males in New Orleans unemployable because of criminal records, lack of education, etc. You can't really say it's because they were black because, well, there are black females working at these places and getting promotions, raises, and things like that. Could resolving the issue of criminal records getting in the way of employment for black men in poorer areas mitigate the violent crime and drug problems..... as now they would have the means to maintain a family structure. Maybe this could have a ripple effect that would automatically lead to an improvement in other areas of life.

My biggest fear in all of this is that if blacks continue down the path of Anti-Americanism and wanting to be part of the cause by blindly supporting any agenda of hate, we'll eventually find ourselves unwittingly supporting Anti-American terrorist groups like ISIS and others who have no other reason to live other than experiencing the joy they get from killing people. These people don't sleep and they are always looking for a pal and many of them don't have any passionate feelings about politics or anything, they just want to be martyrs and nothing more. There are also blacks out there who are racist, because that's just how they are. It has nothing to do with the past or present. However, if to their advantage, they can be allowed to use the past in order to disguise their very real racism as indignation, then that is what they will do..... but one has to be careful about following these people because they are on the war path, and won't stop short of it. So if you don't have that same mentality, you may want to think things through.

The strong have to abide by cause and effect in relation to the weak, just as the weak have to abide by cause and effect in relation to the strong. I wonder why lighter skinned or even mixed blacks are taken more serious on racial issues by the media than blacks who are of darker complexion. I even noticed this throughout history, from Malcolm X, Huey Newton, Muhammad Ali, Jesse Jackson, Louis Farrakhan, Jesse Williams, and now Colin Kaepernick. They seem to be given more credibility. I wonder if because of their lighter skin, they are perceived as more intelligent and that is why they are taken more seriously than darker skinned blacks who preach on some of the same issues. Or could it be that being light skinned puts more pressure on a person to firmly establish an identity even though their qualities as a person come from all aspects of their genetic makeup, not just the African part.

You cannot put all people of color in this country in the same sentence with the African American man. Our struggle is unique. If anything, I'm seeing people of color coming from another country being given more opportunity at the lower economic level than African American Men are. And not only that, I find that it's foreign born people of color who are making every effort to keep African American males out of that lower-paying workforce. In this dynamic, however complex it is, that we are dealing with, the African American male stands alone right now. Not even African American females could understand it.

African American men, please don't allow yourself to be put in the same breath as people of color from another country. They have been much better off than we have been at the lower economic levels and actually have a place of refuge among their own people where they are welcomed with open arms. Something that is not always the case with us, as we still are targets in our own communities by our own people, leaving alot of us stranded in the middle with nowhere to turn.

Satan communicates with man by telling him look out in the distance. He puts his arm around your shoulder, points his finger says "Hey look over there!," And while you're distracted with that, he goes back to doing his dirty work uninterrupted. Works like a charm. This is exactly how criminals operate and I guess it's necessary because if that dynamic is happening in one area, then Satan is right, it must be also happening in another area at a distance, however, it's not wise to completely ignore the one pointing the finger because it makes the case for the Satan located at a distance who's pointing the finger back at us,.....it makes that Satan's case much stronger to the one he's trying to convince as he sees the dirty work of the Satan that we have chosen to ignore because we've taken his word on the problems going on out in the distance.

African Americans have been parading around on television/music videos/advertisements portraying themselves quite often as killers, thugs, pimps for over 20 years. To think that we have no responsibility or play no role whatsoever in how the world should see us is silly. We use our eyes on daily basis. We even make judgements about people by the way they look on a daily basis, but yet we cannot see how other people can look at us and do the same? Will it solve all problems, no....but boy it sure would help if I wasn't on trial at first glance all the time by a world that takes everything they see at face value. I get tired of having to jump through hoops to show I'm not a threat. This change has to come, not so much at the individual level, but at the mass media level because this is where most pre-conceived notions are formed. The eyes and opinions of others are a part of life. Yes people can control how they see others, but they are just as deserving of our efforts to cause them to see us in a positive light ....as we are of their effort to see us in a positive light.

Hillary's choice of words to people in the immediate environment is not her strong suit. Before Trump's recent out of control-behaviour that completely crossed the line in politics, I would have said "is it fair to judge a man's words to the distant environment more harsh than a person's words to the immediate environment. Her daily interactions with her own staff may not affect the country in any significant way, however, this is still someone who will be travelling and meeting with leaders and other representatives around the world. If ever comes a time where her negotiation skills became a critical factor for the US, for example.. like preventing escalated conflict with Russia, then we could definitely have some issues. However, at this point, she is still a better choice than Trump because of the experience and maturity. Being in politics so many years, Hillary has most likely learned the art of timing on when to be nice and when to be a total bitch. Unlike Trump, who would be a rookie with no sense of timing on when to be blunt on issues and when not to be.

It is said that Money is Power. In some ways, that true. But one thing it can never do is replace real power, the power a leader has whose group is united for a common goal under his influence. While the artificial power of money satisfies it's holder for a time, the desire to have people around that are there for reasons other than what's in one's wallet or what can be received through gifts or pay-checks becomes more appealing. This can drive the wealthy into politics because now one is able to influence people whose salary doesn't come from them. Not everyone, however, will have the chance to experience what that real power will ever be like, and will have to continue to settle for the conditional power that money brings. How sensitive one is to the desire for real power will ultimately decide how they react to never being able to attain it.

As a member of the American Public, we have to ask ourselves what is our reasoning behind choosing a candidate. Is it for moral reasons or is it for reasons that have to do with our best interest, not only as an individual but also as a part of the larger community. I'm not implying anything, but I have to bring up the question? Does the way a person deals with their associates impact their ability to get the job done and would this dynamic have any affect on the overall welfare of the American Public. I look at Donald Trump, and I can see with my own eyes and hear with my own ears exactly what the issue with him is going to be and that issue is going to be dangerous rhetoric that could lead to much larger issues in terms of how the public and the world will react to what they hear him say. At the same time, it has to measured against how he deals with people on an interpersonal level, which in my opinion is very good and could be an asset, as he has shown that he can change they way a person thinks and feels in just one meeting with them. He's done this on numerous occasions during his campaign. And this is someone who would be travelling to countries and talking and negotiating with other leaders around the world. But is it enough to make up for his ridiculous speeches? In my opinion, no. Hilary, on the other hand, has proven that she can choose her words better in public, but from hearing on the news about former associates dropping like flies, makes me think that on a one on one level, the chances of her persuading anyone with niceness is very slim. But I also know getting the job done isn't always compatible with being nice, hence, why so many CEO's, sports champions, billionaires, and other high level executives aren't exactly the nicest people on the planet. What kind of leadership is better, strictly in terms of interpersonal communication? One that forces or bulldogs, like Hillary could do or one that persuades like Trump? Now that's just speaking in terms of the working environment.

A reckless tongue in power never gives an order, he merely gives his opinion. And those looking to find favor in his eyes will carry out actions that they believe would please him... in order that they may advance in rank. With this technique, neither side experiences any moral culpability due to one believing he is just talking and other believing he is acting on an order from a superior. So how far can this dynamic be taken, what actions could ever be considered "wrong" or "immoral" by those responsible? Rudolf Hess once wrote that Hitler rarely gave a command, if ever.

Luke 18:11

I see nothing wrong with this prayer. The Pharisee literally thanks God for being the way he is. He didn't thank himself. He basically gives God credit for his good ways.

“Two men went up to the temple to pray. One was a Pharisee and the other a tax collector. 11The Pharisee stood by himself and prayed, ‘God, I thank You that I am not like the other men—swindlers, evildoers, adulterers—or even like this tax collector. 12I fast twice a week and pay tithes of all that I receive.’

Beautiful and Humble Prayer, IMHO.

The Jews, who did not accept Christ, were justified in having Christ crucified for being in violation of a Jewish Law which called for the death penalty. Even being accepted by some Jews as the Messiah does not remove their justification. But Christians, who have accepted the teachings of the Torah and the teachings of Jesus Christ had absolutely no justification for the atrocities that they carried out on the Jews throughout history.

And if it was not for the rise of Islam in the 7th century, Christians might have succeeded in wiping out God's chosen people.

Any individual can rise above his station, but the "natural" characteristics of peoples, races... as a whole.... are etched in stone. And the relationship between God and Man comes most natural to the Jew.

The current Black Lives Matter movement will take it's course, but just like the aftermath of the Watts Riots, the Rodney King Riots, and The Ferguson Riots.....NOTHING will change. Until the African American man musters up the courage to stand against his own kind, his own people.....but this time, not for money, not for power, not for pussy...which he has been able to do with astounding ease, but for distinction between what is right and what is wrong behavior, he will continue to have the actions of thugs and criminals unfairly levied upon him BY EVERYONE. It's the one area where the African American man has fallen short and all for fear of being called a name like house nigga or uncle tom. Remember on the day of Judgement, it's not another black man that will judge you..its gonna be God that does it. Relationship with God is measured by how we feel about ourselves in terms of Good or Bad.

...not happy or sad because those are emotions.

So our state of consciousness in terms of how we see ourselves in terms of Good or Bad is one and the same with our relationship with God and also one and the same with the standard of morality we use as a prescription for our lives. A man who CAN lift a certain amount of weight WILL lift that certain amount of weight.....an amount that another not as strong or equip WILL not even try to use. Why should that man get himself crushed. But, nonetheless, he wants to feel strong so he grabs a lighter weight and writes the poundage of the weight that the stronger guy is using on it and says it's his weight that is labeled correctly.

Jesus's hatred for the pharisees stems from his ADHD or poor learning abilities. In Jewish culture, a huge emphasis is placed on a person's ability to learn, which Christ didn't have much of... As a kid, he was looked down upon by his teachers because of this and grew up with a chip on his shoulder as a result. So his attitude toward them(teacher, pharisees) later in life was a way of getting back at them for how they treated him as a kid not able to keep up with what they were trying to tell him or teach him.

Is a Mental Belief in Jesus really required for salvation? Is it possible that atheist can get in before believers could??? Here is an excerpt from Matthew 25

31 “When the Son of Man comes in His glory, and all the holy[a] angels with Him, then He will sit on the throne of His glory. 32 All the nations will be gathered before Him, and He will separate them one from another, as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats. 33 And He will set the sheep on His right hand, but the goats on the left. 34 Then the King will say to those on His right hand, ‘Come, you blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: 35 for I was hungry and you gave Me food; I was thirsty and you gave Me drink; I was a stranger and you took Me in; 36 I was naked and you clothed Me; I was sick and you visited Me; I was in prison and you came to Me.’

37 “Then the righteous will answer Him, saying, ‘Lord, when did we see You hungry and feed You, or thirsty and give You drink? 38 When did we see You a stranger and take You in, or naked and clothe You? 39 Or when did we see You sick, or in prison, and come to You?’ 40 And the King will answer and say to them, ‘Assuredly, I say to you, inasmuch as you did it to one of the least of these My brethren, you did it to Me.’

41 “Then He will also say to those on the left hand, ‘Depart from Me, you cursed, into the everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels: 42 for I was hungry and you gave Me no food; I was thirsty and you gave Me no drink; 43 I was a stranger and you did not take Me in, naked and you did not clothe Me, sick and in prison and you did not visit Me.’

44 “Then they also will answer Him,[b] saying, ‘Lord, when did we see You hungry or thirsty or a stranger or naked or sick or in prison, and did not minister to You?’ 45 Then He will answer them, saying, ‘Assuredly, I say to you, inasmuch as you did not do it to one of the least of these, you did not do it to Me.’ 46 And these will go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into eternal life.”

Clearly.....in this passage..... Jesus's judgement is based only on ONE thing here.....CHARITY and whats kind of ironic is that the righteous who answered "when did we see you hungry or thirsty" had no inkling or idea that their good works of charity were serving Christ. None at all. Were they atheist????

Jesus Christ is the universal cosmic source that rules over all love, charity, generosity, and kindness towards one's neighbor. He is the essence, cause, and reason that man is able perform any of these actions on earth just as the God of Abraham, Issac and Jacob is the reason that man is able to adhere to laws on earth. You believe in Christ, not with your mouth, not with your mind, but with your actions. One may call the cosmic source of love, generosity, charity, kindness something else, but I choose to call It Christ. Jesus and love for one's neighbor are not mutually exclusive just as God and Law are not mutually exclusive.

Many churches, especially ones with an overwhelmingly high female audience, is oftentimes a macrocosm of the fall that occurred in the garden of eden...where the snake convinces the woman that something is ok to do, and in turn she convinces the man that it is ok. Usually the guy, knowing better(that its not ok), follows along anyway because he loves his woman that much.....to the expense of his own soul. This then causes him to transform into a snake and thus repeat the process.

Declaring, alone, puts you in the game. However, your rules are contingent upon your ability. One who can jump high will leave the basket at 10ft.....those who cannot will get frustrated with the one who can and try to lower the basket to their prospective jumping ability. This pattern continues until someone who cannot jump and has no arms tries to remove the basket completely. Now the game, the little that is left of it, allows the person with no arms to declare himself a GREAT basketball player, and everyone else has to come down to his level. Think of Satan as the guy with no arms.

When you don't give in, he'll keep reminding you that he's the victim. He'll say "hey, look what happened to me." He's brilliant at using human sentiment to steer people away from God, which is his entire mission. Sometimes you just have to 'flat out' say ....
